

Abstract

Implantable cylindrical device for connecting a hose arranged outside of the human or animal body to a hose arranged inside of the said body, wherein an anchoring plate falling away peripherally from the skin surface is arranged around the cylindrical device. This allows the skin to unroll over the anchoring plate subject to a tilting moment of the port body.